

Haematology

Introduction

Medical haematology reviews patients with inborn and acquired rare forms of anaemia, and other blood cell abnormalities and patients with blood clotting or bleeding problems.

Guidance for Patients

Patients referred to the haematology service will be triaged. Appointments are only accepted after consultant review and sometimes patients will be redirected to a more appropriate specialty. This helps to support waiting times and avoid inappropriate appointments for patients.

What should I do if my health is deteriorating?

If you have not yet been seen by the service, please contact your GP for further advice who can escalate your appointment if required.

Patients who are under our existing care will have been provided with a phone number for our warfarin clinic, haemophilia clinic or specialist nurses.
